Squares

Although some say it never went out of fashion due to commodity, the square is back. The modern grid effect that took center stage during the 50's and 60's has been renewed; the power of fashion and pop culture (Instagram) has pushed these classic equilaterals into contemporary combinations with chic, quirky elements.

A 70's revival has generated a push through vibrant jewel tones allowing these tiny squares to create subtle texture due to vast grout lines, whilst the eclectic styling of the 80's frames bold shapes to adorn our walls with a new dynamic, everybody loves a #throwback...

Spellbound - Matt Black

A matt black backdrop will allow carefully selected elements to animate and energize, producing a chic and sophisticated statement regardless of available space.

Interior schemes encourage this vivid midnight shade to offer a base of bold, refined designs for a variety of materials including both marble and metallics.

Big Ideas for Small Spaces

It's in the details...

Did you know that you can enhance your bathroom by opting for copper or brass tile edging and fixtures instead of traditional chrome; this will soften the whole scheme whilst implementing an ingenious luxury as it's a step away from the norm.

dynamic styling

Using different fixing layouts for multiple tiles in your scheme will not only allow each style to project a unique personality and boost tactility, but it can also help to zone particular areas as pictured.

illusive opulence

Taking inspiration from traditional black and white chequered flooring, try using a grey and white marble; this can induce a subtle style statement full of hidden luxurious connotations without being overpowering to your scheme...

Secret Statement

Chances are your cloakroom door will always be closed, this is your chance to be a brave and experiment with styles and colours you might usually shy away from; a burst of pattern on the floor is always a great start!

Q&A

Why should I choose tiles over other materials for my bathroom?

Louisa Says: When considering your options for both floor and wall surfaces within bathroom it's important to understand your personal needs and the practicality of materials for the setting itself. Unfortunately bathrooms have a typically steamy, damp environment making it essential to find suitable, efficient materials that will stand the test of time. Tiles used with anti-mould grout are the preferred choice to keep bathrooms looking clean and fresh. To avoid any unwanted accidents, anti-slip floor tiles are always advisable; especially in wet rooms. There are a multitude of styles to choose from that can be use throughout the home such as wood effect. For those of you that desire a long lasting look within the bathroom, consider stone effect tiles; now more lifelike than ever in varying styles with realistic textures and riven details, they can even be used in coordination with natural stone mosaics to inject opulent focal points and you won't be able to tell them apart. (At Walls and Floors we offer a complete range of LTP products to seal and maintain natural stone with ease.)

Q&A

I love black, but how can I stop my bathroom becoming drab and dull?

Louisa Says: A dark bathroom will produce the ultimate interior style statement. This vivid backdrop full of delicate textures lends a sense of drama, doused in chic sophistication; the dark reflective surfaces work in contrast with the crisp white suite, making it appear, completely poised with an understated elegance. Remember you can also change the haptic temperature of your scheme with accent colours; seagreen is cool and refreshing, but a vibrant maroon is full of cosy notes...

Q&A

I really want a modern country look, what flooring would you recommend?

Louisa Says: A typical modern style for a country feel would be a modular flooring option in a tumbled stone effect, mixed sizes heighten the impression of realistic natural materials as no two elements will be the same. Many of our multisize stone effect collections have pre-designed layouts available to make ease of the fixing process. These luxury stone effect collections are available in a wide choice of colours and styles aiming to enhance your interiors with a naturalistic, rural feel. Texturised stone designs in high definition are combined with delicately chipped and chamfered edges to not only amplify an authentic appearance but also provide an anti-slip surface – ideal for a busy country style home.

Q&A

How can I give my hallway a dark makeover without it looking gloomy?

Louisa Says: Create an intimate yet balanced feel using a contrasting mix of natural materials to generate a lavish, dramatic interior. Keep ceilings light and form your interior from the base of the room opting for vibrant hues with a warming undertone such as a rich teak wood. Secondly moving upwards; inject a cool layer of natural polished marble; the reflective surface will enhance both light and luxury. Finish by drawing the room back in with a top heavy coat of paint in a dark yet neutral shade such as a deep forest green. The mix of cool and warm tones offset by matt and gloss textures will add instant opulence and prevent your hallway from feeling dismal.

Natural Carrara

Elegant and Luxurious, our Italian Carrara Marble is one of the finest stones you can buy. Quarried in the city of Carrara in Tuscany, Italy. This deluxe natural marble varies from piece to piece as the veins naturally flow throughout the rock-side, whilst the opulent polished surface aids to provide a sophisticated and organic statement suitable within any desired setting.

The UK seems to have gone crazy for our Scintilla tiles; one of our favourite things to do is scroll our tagged IG feed to view some of the creative ways our customers are using these charismatic decors; from feature flooring to fireplaces, kitchen splashbacks and even tiled rugs alongside mixed materials; here is a selection of our most loved, including an adorable selfie from CeCe and Stella!

Scintilla is a pre-scored ceramic tile that when grouted gives the illusion of 4 smaller tiles; due to the popularity of our Black Star we have recently launched 4 new colours for those that want a twist on the number one monochrome; a cool Sapphire blue, warming Paprika, Olive green and subdued Silver.

Our much loved Scintilla Sapphire tile took centre stage at the Ideal Home Show this Spring as part of the Evolving Home at the Kensington Olympia, styled by Simone and Sophie from Owl Design.

This industrial themed shower room ajoined the tropical annex bedroom to provide inspiration on how to update an existing bathroom, without having to change traditional fittings.

The annex was designed with the boomerang generation in mind; a mix of black wall tiles, pattern floor and industrial style lamps bring a contemporary refresh to the term 'granny annex' making it a perfect bathroom refresh for the returning #boomerangchild ...

Q&A

How can I make my small neglected garden, maintenance free?

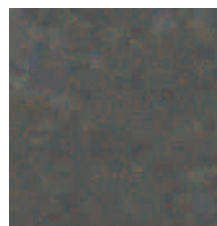

Louisa Says: A garden space can still be beautiful and welcoming without the need for multiple lawns and flower beds; the quickest solution to achieve a truly low maintenance outdoor space would be to remove the grass and replace with paving. When the long awaited summer heatwave arrives, take your décor into the garden; comfy outdoor furniture and beautiful lighting will aid an instant homely vibe, whilst keeping a few evergreen planters will provide a connection to nature throughout the year and heighten that outdoor feel - Maximum joy, minimum fuss.

Q&A

What are the best external tiles to use to give our courtyard a little more character?

Louisa Says: These days many of us prefer to have a beautiful outdoor space that's as low maintenance as possible. Laying a patterned terrace is not only an excellent way of injecting some vibrancy into your space; it is also perfect for zoning a multifunctional area. Animated jewel tones can be used to brighten up a scheme so you don't need to add multiple pot plants or hanging baskets; the best part is, tiles don't die back after summer. Try enhancing your layout further with sophisticated styling, including smart and comfy rattan furniture for relaxing on.

Q&A

I suffer with asthma and want to tile my bedroom, will it be cold?

Louisa Says: Tiles are generally fixed onto ply-wood in a bedroom thus creating layer of insulation, allowing the tiles to keep a basic room temperature, no different to other hard surfaces; tiles also make a perfect choice for asthma sufferers as they are much easier to keep free of dust. If you are looking for a little extra cosy indulgence, you could opt for under floor heating solutions or simply layer with a fluffy rug!

I'm personally very fond of wood effect tiles in bedrooms; they provide natural textures aiding the base of a relaxing, organic colour palette which is often needed in a bedroom. For a more opulent approach; indulge in a herringbone or chevron layout with a coordinating feature wall, this will provide a tactile statement with the upmost sophistication.

BoCoCa - White Wash Chevron

BoCoCa

Full of quirky textures, our unique paint-wash chevron tiles combine a realistic wood grain with a gentle, aged paint effect. Made from high quality porcelain these tiles are suitable for inside and out proving a great way to make an artistic statement; our chevrons are available in 4 pastel hues including an urban mix for those looking to inject a little extra vibrancy. Coordinating plank tiles and undulating wall decors are also available - please see online for more details.

Q&A

How can I design a shared environment for my family to work?

Louisa Says: Many families have two or more children making limited space in their homes and therefore unable to provide an office area for children or parents alone; shared environments are becoming increasingly popular due to the general need for an improved family connection. I would recommend zoning areas with attractive wall features to generate aesthetically pleasing work stations – for example a desk area with a vertical focal point in one part of the room and a reading nook with a horizontal feature in another. It's also important to maximise on space within the given room; Cork tiles provide a soft, warm, flooring solution that form a versatile environment, suitable for a family to utilise when working or playing together. Take a typically mundane space and create an eye-catching delight your family will love spending time in.
